11:30	National University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy, Centre for Polish and European Studies (NaUKMA Building 6, underground floor, entrance from Voloska 8/5,	Intellectuals as Bad Guys? (nationalism, war and the role of intellectuals in Balkan wars) Slavenka Drakulic Slavenka Drakulić is a noted Croatian novelist and non-fiction writer who lives in Sweden. Drakulić temporarily left Croatia for Sweden in the early 1990s for political reasons. A notorious unsigned 1992 Globus article (Slaven Letica, a known

According to Letica, these writers failed to take a definitive stance against rape as a planned military tactic by Bosnian Serb forces against Croats, and rather treated it in feminist fashion, as crimes of "unidentified males" against women. Soon after the publication, Drakulić started to receive telephone threats; her property was also vandalized. Finding little or no support from her erstwhile friends and colleagues, she decided to leave Croatia. Drakulić has written for various newspapers and magazines in many different languages, including The Nation, La Stampa, Dagens Nyheter, Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, Eurozine, and Politiken. Her noted recent works relate to the Yugoslav wars. As If I Am Not There is about crimes against women in the Bosnian War, while They Would Never Hurt a Fly is a book in which she also analyzed her experience overseeing the proceedings and the inmates of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia at The Hague. She also wrote "How We Survived Communism and Even Laughed" which is the non-fiction account of Drakulić's life under communism. Her latest book of essays A Guided Tour Through the Museum of Communism: Fables from a Mouse, a Parrot, a Bear, a Cat, a Mole, a Pig, a Dog, & a Raven was published in February 2011 in the US by Penguin. Moderator: Kateryna Dysa, NaUKMA Language of the event – English without translation Attendance is possible only after registration*. *УВАГА! His admirers liken his cosmopolitan style to that of the so-called New York Intellectuals of the mid-twentieth century, whose conversation-shaping essays on big topics came out in the little magazines of the day. His books—published in fifteen languages—include Terror and Liberalism (a New York Times best-seller in 2003), The Flight of the Intellectuals, A Tale of Two Utopias, Power and the Idealists, and an illustrated children's book, Make-Believe Empire.
